SEE THE WORLD THROUGH A NEW LENS

Y Media Works Summer Institute offers young people the opportunity to learn media arts from gifted local artists. During the school year, our artists teach media basics through in-school and after-school programs throughout Metropolitan Detroit. Our summer program is our opportunity to dive deeper into media production techniques and gain experience with advanced technology. With downtown Detroit as a canvas for their creative endeavors and enriching arts and media oriented field trips, this is a summer program not to be missed!

MEDIA WORKS

Ages: 12–18 years

Now in its tenth year, our Y Media Works Summer Institute gives campers a rare chance to be independent media makers producing their own film ideas, photography projects, stop motion animation, and digital music compositions.

Our program fosters creativity, technical knowledge, collaboration, and visual storytelling. Working alongside local professional artist instructors and visiting area production houses, television studios and other media-based businesses, our campers gain an understanding of the variety of creative careers available to them.

THEME AND PARTNERSHIP

Every summer our campers embrace and celebrate Detroit. Thanks to our partnership with area artists and Y Arts Advisory Board members John Sauve and Tony D'Annunzio, as well as working alongside QL Media House, Y Media Works campers get a chance to interact with professional artists, tour facilities dedicated to media production, and learn about creative career possibilities.

In addition to media field trips, we love taking our campers to other fun and enriching sites in the summer. Area museums, parks, and television stations are exciting mainstays of our program.

All in all our 2017 Summer Institute will give our participants an unforgettable creative experience that explores our city and the art and artists that make it such an amazing place to live.
